Values

Values are important to us; they are guide us as we decide what matters most in our lives. They are unique to each individual, and they can change over time. Values are like a roadmap or a compass, guiding us, giving us direction, and helping us prioritize how we spend our time. They guide our daily decisions, and every decision is an opportunity to live, moment by moment, according to our values. They are our deepest longings.

Values are different from goals, desires, needs, ethics, morals, feelings, rules, beliefs, and codes of conduct. Kelly Wilson, one of the founders of Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT), which emphasizes the importance of values, states the following:1

- Values are here and now.
- Values never need to be justified.
- Values often need to be prioritized.
- Values are best held lightly.
- Values are freely chosen.

Values: Exploration and Clarification
To help yourself or someone else develop a better sense of their values, try the following six exercises.

1. The Sweet Spot Exercise (adapted from Wilson, 20081)
Bring to mind a memory where you experienced some of the sweetness and richness of life. Re-experience this memory using all of your senses. Make it vivid. Make room for all the sensations, thoughts, and emotions that arise. Describe it as if it is happening in the present moment: “This is what I notice. This is what I see and hear.” Then ask yourself the following questions:

What does this memory reveal about what matters to you?

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________

What personal qualities were you showing?

__________________________________________________________________________
__________________________________________________________________________
How were you treating yourself, others, and the world around you?

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

What does this suggest about the way you’d like to behave or the things you’d like to do, moving forward?

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

The following exercises are other ways to explore your values:

2. The 90th Birthday Exercise
Imagine yourself at your 90th birthday party, surrounded by all the people your life has touched. As you connect with this image, spend a few minutes reflecting on what you would like people to say about you. There are no limits to what you can be remembered for. Imagine the guests at the party sharing a series of brief statements that would capture the essence of the life that you led. What would they say about the person you were and the life that you led? What is it you would want to be remembered for?

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________

__________________________________________________________________________________________
3. Values Top Ten and Top Three Exercise
A value is a direction that you would like to move toward in your life. It is not a destination, but more of a direction you move toward. Values are important because working toward them brings meaning and satisfaction to your life.2

What stands out to you as some of your top priorities for your life? Only list the ones that you really want to work toward. You can use the “Common Personal Values” list on the following page, if you would like, for additional ideas.

1. ______________________________
2. ______________________________
3. ______________________________
4. ______________________________
5. ______________________________
6. ______________________________
7. ______________________________
8. ______________________________
9. ______________________________
10. ______________________________
After you have created your top-ten list, decide which ones are most important. Compress the list down to your “top three” values, and list them below:

1. ____________________________________________
2. ____________________________________________
3. _____________________________________________

Common Personal Values

- Accomplishment, Accountability, Accuracy, Adventure, All for one & one for all
- Beauty
- Calm (quietude), Challenge, Change, Charity, Cleanliness, Collaboration, Commitment, Communication, Community, Competence, Competition, Concern for others, Connection, Content over form, Continuous improvement, Cooperation, Coordination, Creativity, Customer satisfaction
- Decisiveness, Delight in being, Democracy, Determination, Discipline, Discovery, Diversity, Dynamism
- Ease of use, Efficiency, Enjoyment, Equality, Excellence
- Fairness, Faith, Faithfulness, Family, Family feeling, Flair, Freedom/liberty Friendship, Fun
- Generosity, Gentleness, Global view, Goodness, Goodwill, Gratitude
- Happiness, Hard work, Harmony, Health, Honor, Human-centered
- Improvement, Independence, Individuality, Inner peace, Innovation, Integrity, Intelligence, Intensity
- Joy, Justice
- Kindness, Knowledge
- Leadership, Love (romance), Loyalty, Maximum use (of time and resources)
- Meaning, Merit, Money
- Oneness, Openness, Order, Others’ point of view
- Patriotism, Peace (non-violence), Perfection, Perseverance, Personal growth, Pleasure, Power, Practicality, Preservation, Privacy, Progress, Prosperity, Punctuality
- Quality of work
- Regularity, Reliability, Resourcefulness, Respect for others, Responsiveness, Results-oriented, Rule of law
- Teamwork, Timeliness, Tolerance, Tradition, Tranquility, Trust, Truth
- Unity, Variety
- Wealth, Well-being, Wisdom
The following are domains or areas where you might hold important values. In each area below, write what matters to you and/or what you value in each area:

Family Relationships:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Health:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Community:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Friends/Social Relationships:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Couples/Romantic Relationships:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Work/Career:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Personal Growth/Personal Development:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Spirituality/Faith/Religion:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Recreation/Leisure Time:
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
Goals:

Values come first, then goals. Goals are action items that we set for the future including short-term, medium-term, and long-term goals. Behaviors are what we do to accomplish our goals. Think about setting goals that are SMART.

SMART goals are:

- Specific
- Measurable
- Action-Oriented
- Realistic
- Timed

4. Identifying Obstacles to Living According to One’s Values

It is common to have barriers that interfere with our ability to pursue our values. Some of them will be external (e.g., family commitments, work demands, lack of time, financial concerns), and some will be internal (e.g., stress, worries, self-doubt, lack of confidence). In the space below, write down your five most important values. Then, in the space next to it, write down the biggest barriers or difficulties that are getting in your way as you pursue them. Think about how you might continue to move in the direction of your values, even when obstacles and difficulties arise.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Value</th>
<th>Barriers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5. Committed Action Exercise: Taking It Deeper (adapted from Russ Harris, 2011)

In this next section, there are some questions to help you explore your top value in more depth.

Part One:
What is one value that has high importance but you haven’t expressed a lot?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

What have you been doing that is taking you away from, or is inconsistent with, this value?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

What and how has it cost you?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

What obstacles and challenges have gotten in your way?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

Part Two:
What do you want to do now in the direction of this value?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

What will you commit to do and when will you do it?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

What obstacles and challenges might arise?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________

How can you navigate through these challenges and obstacles to continue to take committed action toward this value?
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________________________
6. Committed Action Exercise: Setting Goals for Your Top Three Values (adapted from Vowles & Sorrell, 2008²)

Take your top three values from Exercise 3, above, and identify a single goal that is consistent with each one. Next, come up with three specific behaviors you can engage in that will assist you in achieving each of your three goals.

1. Value
   1. Goal:
      a. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      b. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      c. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________

2. Value
   1. Goal:
      a. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      b. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      c. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________

3. Value
   1. Goal:
      a. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      b. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
      c. Behavior: ___________________________________________________________
Author(s)
“Values” was adapted for the University of Wisconsin Integrative Health Program from the original written by Shilagh A. Mirgain, PhD and Janice Singles PsyD (2014, updated 2018).

This tool was made possible through a collaborative effort between the University of Wisconsin Integrative Health Program, VA Office of Patient Centered Care and Cultural Transformation, and Pacific Institute for Research and Evaluation.

References