

Allison Rodriguez is a second year MPH student at the UW-Madison School of Medicine and Public Health. She received her B.S. in Biology and Global Health from UW-Madison in 2012. She served in the Peace Corps as a community health volunteer in Nicaragua for two years before returning to Madison to work as a bilingual early childhood home visitor for three years with RISE Wisconsin.

When not working or studying, Allison can usually be found playing soccer, baking or hanging out with friends and family.